The applicant contented in the argument that a process of the proposed combination of US 5,917,556 and US 6,480,202 could not result in a successful article within this particular a black-approximated data calculating means calculating a black-approximated data composed of said predetermined number of color data and related to luminance and least one of chromaticity and tristimulus in displaying black based on the basis of said black characteristic specifying data. The examiner agreed and allowed the application after incorporating the specific said predetermined number of color data and related to luminance into all independent claims 1 and 21, and said predetermined number of color data and related to the data input from the image display user and at least one of luminance into all independent claims 41 and 42 (see pages 2-24 of applicant's amendment).
